FOREWORD

We have spent some of the most momentous days in world history and some of the most formative days in our lives at Mars Hill, under the molding influence of our Alma Mater surrounded by towering mountains. We have learned to look upward with a new faith at a time when we needed it most. These mountains and the college walls have served to shield us from the agonies of a war stricken world, but we did not forget to look beyond the hills and walls to count the cost of fear and hate. We could not forget because of the absence of hundreds of boys—boys who would have chosen to be here under the shadow of these quiet hills. The spirit of these cool, serene, and peaceful mountains suggests the motif for this edition of the LAUREL.

During the spring of 1945 we rejoiced together over the defeat of Germany. When we returned to the campus in the autumn, Japan had fallen, and we began our year of work together in a world at peace for almost the first time in our lives. Now the time has come for some of us to leave these mountains of inspiration. New horizons beckon and we go, taking with us much which cannot be forgotten. Things like Bailey's peak, forever reflecting the mood of the mountains; the ecstasy created by the golden hills at autumn, forever to be a joy; the high ideals of society, forever spurring us on to the best; the smiling faces of true friends found here, forever to be remembered as diadems in crowns of love; the fellowships and watches, forever to inspire; the teachers who have imparted to us truth, forever to be honored by our contributions to humanity—all these and many more real values will pass with us into life and remain always, because the things received here will not crumble with consuming time. They are eternal. As a reminder of these days together, the Staff presents

The Laurel of 1946

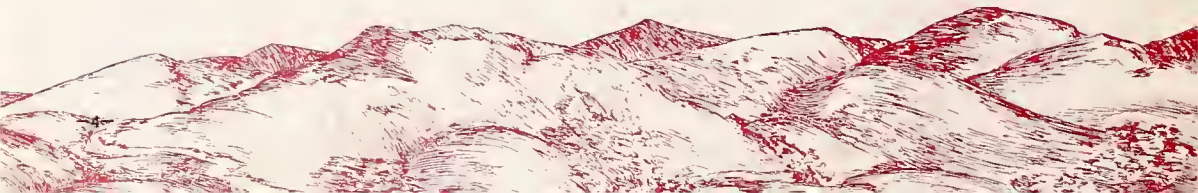

Manifest Strength

O strength of the mountains,
They drained you of your men;
They robbed you of the youth that grew in the shadows of your might,
And having taken all, the drums of war retreated,
But much remained.

And the youth that marched in columns,
The youth that bombed at night,
The youth that crawled through fire,
And the youth that sat and waited
Left within your care that which meant life to them:
A sunrise seen through tearless eyes,
A clear bell ringing on a quiet night,
A smile, and eyes that melt hatred and fear,
Strains of music that rise from flooding hearts and sweep up into the hills,
Joyous and thrilling laughter,
The twitter of birds, the soft notes that suddenly burst into a rapturous melody,
An unseen feeling that binds human souls in perfect love, in understanding,
A sunset that tints the mind with calm, and that blinds the soul to all but beauty,
The silence of prayers that whisper of hope.

And into a deeper silence they went forever,
But some returned.
And the youth that reached out to you Found for the first time your strength,
O strength of the mountains.

Societies

NON - EU

Non-Eu has taken us into paths of nobility and high thinking with dignity, simplicity, and conservatism as the guiding lights before us. Our lives have been molded by the power of these ideals and the unexcelled standards of right fostered in our society. With happy reminiscences we leave the Hall of Black and Gold, and with us there goes all the sublime that has been awakened through knowing Nonpareil and Euthalia.

"Hail to thy returning festival, old Bishop Valentine!
 . . . Thou comest attended with thousands of little loves."

To Clio-Phi, from Non and Eu,
We pledge our loyalty so true.
We'll ne'er forget the days
with you,

Dear Clio-Phi.

To Blue and White, from Black and Gold,

Our memories will ne'er grow old,

We'll cherish them down through the years,

Dear Clio-Phi.

With every dawn that we awaken,

We shall keep your ideals high,

And strive to keep the banner
Of Non-Eu and Clio-Phi.

Here on this night we sing to you,

Dear Clio-Phi, our friends so true,

And in whate'er you strive to do,
We're backing you.

To Non and Eu, we pledge our love the whole year through,
To standards high of M. H. C.
They're always true.
They're trying and striving
To keep their colors high,
To happiness and to success they lift their banners to the sky.
To Non and Eu, whose fellowship is always true,
To Black and Gold from Blue and White
We'll say to you:
We'll love you with a heart
so bold
On this memorable night, we'll say to you:
God bless you, Non and Eu.

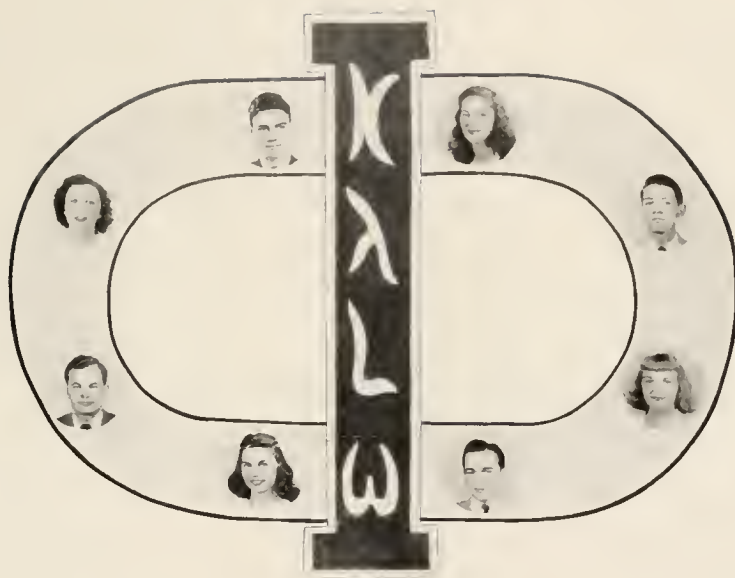

CLIO - PHI

Clio-Phi has led us through the archway of lasting truth, into the path of purity, and upward to the heights of fidelity. As we have followed the gleam of these ideals, our hands have joined in lasting friendships forever inspiring us onward to striving for the truly noble. Reluctantly we leave the Hall of Blue and White with all of its joyous memories and inspiration, but joyfully we take with us the eternal truths and happiness found here in Clio-Philomathia.
